

An Update on BC Ferries' Langdale Terminal Redevelopment Plan

Hello Sunshine Coast Residents,

We want to keep you up-to-date as our team continues to move forward with the Langdale Terminal Development project. This month's update looks at what we're currently working on and what's next for the project, and introduces you to a new face at BC Ferries. Please read below for more details.

What's happening now

We are currently working on materials selection, such as flooring, wall finishes, and so on for the new terminal building. We heard great feedback during our public engagement sessions and are looking to align our selections with what we heard regarding the use of natural materials and colour. We have now published the engagement summary report on our website. To see the report, visit the Langdale page at bcferries.com/about/terminal-development-planning.

In April we also submitted a revised plan to the Department of Fisheries and Oceans that optimized our design so it minimizes the impact on the intertidal area around the lower holding compound. We significantly reduced the impact to the shoreline by redesigning a few foot passenger lanes to be more efficient in a smaller space.

What's next

We continue to work on construction details and planning, particularly looking at potential construction impacts and how to best mitigate them. We are working with the Sunshine Coast Regional District (SCRD), BC Transit and other local stakeholders to identify impacts and how we can reduce them. We are on schedule and expect to start the preliminary stages of construction work at the terminal this summer. Stay tuned for more details, which we expect to be able to provide in my next update in May. As I mentioned in my last update, we've planned construction on the new overhead walkway and terminal building to start in the fall, and be complete within three years.
